Project Title: Wandersong Website

Project Overview

The intent of this site is give information on the background of this game, more than you can find on a store page, but this is not a wiki! I want to emphasize all the inspiration behind making this game, as well as how it was really only made by two people. Using the game's visuals and tone, I would also like this to inspire people to play with wonderful colorful video game.

Resources

Most information can be found on the Wikipedia page <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Wandersong> as well as on the Fandom Wiki wandersong.fandom.com/wiki/Wandersong Wiki. Images and videos can be found on Google.

Audience

This will be for a lot of people. Both those who play video games and those who don't, wanting to know more about this game to see if it's up their alley. This site might end up being part of my portfolio, so it will be reviewed by instructors and peers as well.

Message

I really want to focus on the joy, whimsy, and fun this game is. It's a music adventure, made just by a couple of people, and you should play it. :)

Tone

The tone should match that of the game. Fun, silly, whimsical, and hopefully inspiring (either to make a game yourself (or other type of story) or to play this one).

Visual Style

The visual style will heavily rely on the style of the game. Bold, bright solid colors with varying textures. I would really like to add some analog elements to this as well (cut paper or other physical textures). Since this game was inspired by Kirby's Epic Yarn, using some of that softer (more pastel) look might be more inviting.

Some screenshots from the game. This second one includes the music/color wheel mechanic, which I would like to include somewhere on the site.

Images from Kirby's Epic Yarn. I really appreciate the texture of everything. Even though Wandersong itself isn't as textured, I like the use or mimicking physical media in this context.

These are screenshots from a Wandersong website (not sure if it's the official one). This is just one approach to using the in game imagery on a website, though I think it can be less bold. Website found here <https://wanderso.ng/>
