Project Title: Wandersong Website

Mockup A

- The colors here are working great - I appreciate the use of the bolder purple/pink but lighter blue/yellow. It adds a nice contrast and isn't too busy
- Question: Did you design this as a single page?
- I think the single page design can work, but it wasn't what I originally had in mind.
- I can't tell if all the sections are dropdown menus (because of the little arrows)
- The wave-like background design adds a good rhythm to the site
- The three images on the mobile version will probably be too small to see well - I'd condense it down to showing one image at a time, like you've done for the development section
- Somewhere (on the home page, like was in the original design idea) there should be an embedded trailer for the game, and links to where to purchase the game.
- The offset frames are done well - really capture the whimsical and playful tone I was going for

Mockup B

*NOTHING SHOWN FOR MOCKUP B

Other Notes

- Even though this single page design works, I would still prefer separate pages. However you can keep the background for each page - maybe different color schemes?
- More visuals!
- Under the About page, there should be a character section with the three main characters (The Bard, Miriam, Audrey) as outlined in our initial meeting notes.
